Acknowledgement and Waiver

The Catholic Bushwalking Club Inc ("Club") advises all intending and actual participants in any of the activities of the Club that any or all of those activities may be considered "adventure sport" require appropriate physical fitness, competence and equipment and may involve an element of risk. Participants in any activity of the Club do so voluntarily and in the knowledge of the fitness, competence and the equipment required and fully understanding and accepting the risks involved. All participants acknowledge that they take part in such activities at their own risk and will hold none of the Club, the leader(s), others involved in organising or assisting with the activity or any of the other participants in an activity responsible for any death, injury or loss that may result to them or to others through participation in the activity whether due to negligence, misadventure, accident or otherwise. Those inviting visitors on activities or deliberately or otherwise providing details of Club activities to others indemnify the Club and agree that in doing so they have made the terms of this Acknowledgement and Waiver clear and that those participating in an activity as a consequence do so in full acceptance of this Acknowledgement and Waiver. The Club, its leaders, those assisting in organising and those participating in an activity may, to the fullest extent permitted by the law, rely on this Acknowledgement and Waiver as a bar or limitation to any claim for death, injury or loss that may result from such activity.

By returning this form and/or paying your prospective membership application fee you warrant that all of the information you have provided is both complete and correct and you agree to the terms of this Acknowledgement and Waiver and indemnify the Club, its leaders, those assisting in organising and those participating in an activity for any death, injury or loss that may result to them or to others through participation in the activity.
