Acknowledgement and Waiver

The Catholic Bushwalking Club Inc ("Club") advises all prospective and actual participants in any of the activities listed in the CBC News that any or all of those activities may be considered "adventure sport", require appropriate physical fitness, competence and equipment and may involve an element of risk. Participants of any activity listed in the CBC News do so voluntarily and in the knowledge of the fitness, competence and equipment required and fully understanding and accepting the risks involved. All participants acknowledge that they take part in such activities at their own risk and will hold none of the Club, the leader(s), others involved in organising or assisting with the activity or any of the other participants responsible for any death, injury or loss that may result to them or others through participation in the activity whether due to negligence, misadventure, accident or otherwise. Those inviting visitors on activities or deliberately or otherwise making the CBC News available to others indemnify the Club and therefore agree that in doing so they have made the terms of this acknowledgement and waiver clear and that those participating in an activity as a consequence do so in full acceptance of this acknowledgement and waiver. The Club, its leaders, those assisting and participating in an activity may, to the fullest extent permissible by the law rely on this acknowledgement and waiver as a bar or limitation to any claim for death, injury or loss that may result from participation in such activity.
